DISTRIBUTOR POLICIES AND PROCEDURES

The rules of being a Delta One distributor

Plain rules for anyone who introduces others to Delta One. They protect members, protect you and protect the company. Breaking them ends the distributorship.

Draft for legal review. This document was prepared in plain language so that counsel can edit a complete text rather than start from nothing. It is not in force until Delta One's legal entity, governing law and regulatory position have been confirmed and the document has been approved and published. Bracketed items are decisions for Delta One or its lawyers.

1 · WHO IS A DISTRIBUTOR

Definitions

- A member holds a Delta One account and one or more modules. A distributor is a member who has accepted the Distributor Agreement and introduces others. Introducing is optional; most members never do it.
- A line is one person you personally enrolled and everyone enrolled beneath them. Your organization is all your lines.
- Delta One means [the issuing entity], its DAO Treasury and its authorised staff. The app is the Delta One application and web app.
- Published documents are the current versions on the Delta One document sites; they alone state the figures and rules a distributor may use.

2 · BECOMING AND REMAINING A DISTRIBUTOR

Eligibility and standing

- You are at least 18 (or the age of majority where you live), have completed identity verification, hold at least one active module, and have accepted the Distributor Agreement.
- One person, one account, one position. Household members may each hold their own account under their own name; an account may not be held for someone else.
- Your enroller is fixed once your first module is confirmed. Transfers between lines are not permitted except on written approval by Delta One for an error at enrollment.

- You remain in good standing while you follow these policies, keep an active module and hold no unresolved complaint against you. Rank is a daily qualification, not a status.

3 · WHAT YOU MAY SAY

Claims, figures and language

- Use only figures that appear in a published document, with the word average every time a rate or a date appears, and never as a promise.
- Describe the product as a purchase of the AI engine in modules, software as a service, delivering at most 2× its price then ending. Never as a deposit, investment, fund, account, savings or interest.
- Describe commission as a share of a contract's daily earnings, paid only when the engine made a profit that day; never as passive income, residual rewards or a reward for recruiting.
- State, in every presentation and in every written offer: results and rewards are not guaranteed; most members earn no commission at all; the purchase price is not refundable and can be lost.
- Never show your own or anyone's earnings as typical or expected. Never claim or imply that Delta One is a bank, is regulated as a fund, is government-backed or is risk-free.
- Read the disclosure page of the presentation in full at every presentation. Hand the Key Facts to every prospect before they decide.
- The Language Card is part of these policies.

4 · ADVERTISING AND SOCIAL MEDIA

Where and how you may promote

- Use only Delta One's published materials, unchanged, or your own words that follow section 3. Do not create your own figures, charts, videos or documents with Delta One's name or mark without written approval.
- Every public post that mentions results or commission carries the disclosure line: "Figures are illustrations at the engine's average daily result; results and rewards are not guaranteed; most members earn no commission; capital at risk." Until compliance sign-off, add "Draft for legal and compliance review".
- No paid advertising, no mass messaging, no cold messaging of strangers, no scraping of contacts, no use of Delta One's name in domain names, handles or page names without written approval.
- No claims about regulation, licences, partnerships, exchanges, custodians or audits beyond what the published documents say.
- Delta One may require any post, page or video to be corrected or removed within 24 hours of notice.

5 · ENROLLING AND SUPPORTING MEMBERS

Your duties to the people you introduce

- Before a prospect decides: the Key Facts, the risks, the fact that the plan is optional, and the fact that a module's price is not refundable.
- Never recommend a module size. Say only: "only an amount you could afford to lose entirely". Never lend, collect or hold money or USDT for a member, and never enter a member's wallet or account.
- Never pay for, or buy modules for, a prospect or member, and never offer any inducement outside the published plan.
- On day 0 and day 11 you sit with your new member (in person or by call): wallet, network, the first ten days, the switch, the first withdrawal. The Member Journey Calendar is the standard.
- A member may always contact Delta One directly. You do not stand between a member and the company.

6 · MONEY

Purchases, commission, taxes and records

- All purchases are made by the member, from the member's own wallet, to the address shown in the app. Distributors never receive, forward or hold purchase money.
- Commission is computed and paid by Delta One at the 12:00 UTC settlement to your app wallet in USDT, under the published Momentum Plan. No other payment, bonus or reward exists.
- You are responsible for your own taxes and declarations where you live. Delta One issues statements, not tax advice.
- Keep copies of what you send to prospects and members for [two] years. Delta One may ask for them when handling a complaint.
- A purchase made with funds that are not yours, with another person's identity, or to manipulate rank is a breach and may be reversed.

7 · COMPLAINTS AND BREACHES

What happens when something goes wrong

Situation	Consequence
A prospect or member complains about a claim you made	Delta One reviews your materials and messages; you may be asked to correct the record in writing to the person.

Situation	Consequence
An unapproved figure or a banned word in public material	Written warning and removal within 24 hours; a second instance suspends commission for [30] days.
Promising or implying a guaranteed result, or presenting earnings as typical	Immediate suspension pending review; termination on confirmation.
Handling a member's money, wallet or account; paying for a prospect's module; stacking positions	Termination and reversal of affected commission; referral to authorities where the law requires.
Harassment, pressure selling, or targeting of vulnerable people	Termination.

You may answer any allegation in writing within [7] days. Decisions are made by Delta One's compliance function and may be appealed once to [the board / an independent reviewer]. Suspension stops commission; it does not stop your own modules, which continue under their own terms.

8 · LEAVING

Termination, resignation and cooling-off

- You may resign as a distributor at any time in writing. Your modules continue under their own terms; your organization remains in place and your line's commission flows to the next qualified upline under the published rules.
- You may cancel the Distributor Agreement within [14] days of accepting it with no consequence. [Jurisdictional cooling-off rights for purchases are a matter for legal review; the module's own terms state that a purchase is not refundable.]
- Delta One may terminate for breach under section 7, or on [30] days' notice if the distributor programme ends or changes in a way that requires a new agreement.
- After termination you may not present yourself as connected to Delta One, use its materials or contact its members on its behalf.

9 · CHANGES

How these policies change

Delta One may change these policies with [30] days' notice on the document site and in the app, except where a change is required immediately by law or a regulator. The current version on the document site is the one in force. Changes do not reduce commission already earned.

Programs that pay introducers from the trading results of the people they enrol are regulated as securities and/or direct selling in many jurisdictions. These policies are a draft for legal review; licensing, the governing law and the issuing entity are to be confirmed before any distributor activity begins.
