THE PARTNERSHIP

Two Founders, One Standard

Delta One is led by two Utah founders with very different résumés and the same standard. James Pack, the Founder, built a direct-selling company from a 2007 start-up to the DSN Global 100 and more than one hundred million USD of revenue, after forty years of building businesses in telecom and real estate. Ricky Lundell, the President, won multiple world championships, spent more than two decades coaching UFC champions, and trained more than two thousand Navy SEALs and special operations personnel. One knows how to build a field organization that lasts; the other knows how to prepare people to perform under pressure. Together they set the rule every Delta One document is written to: say exactly how it works, prove the numbers, and never promise what trading has not earned.

How Delta One is governed

Member funds at Delta One are held in multi-signature wallets. No purchase, payout, commission run or transfer to a trading account moves on a single signature: the founders and the Architect who runs the trading engine sign together, and the back office reconciles every wallet against the exchange statements every day. Members' results and distributors' commissions are paid at the 12:00 UTC settlement, in USDT, only from the profit the engine actually made that day.

Principle	What it means in practice
No profit, no payout	On a day without trading profit nobody is paid — not members, not leaders, not the founders' seats.
Every module ends at 2×	A module delivers at most twice the amount put in, purchase price included. Nothing is promised beyond it.
Half to members, a quarter to the plan, a quarter to the Treasury	Every USDT of trading profit is split the same way, every day; commission never comes from purchases.
Proven, not promised	Every figure in the library is recalculated independently and re-run a thousand times; the audits are published.
Four signatures	James Pack, Ricky Lundell, Chris and the Architect sign together; the trading structure and the cash-flow controls are documented.

Why it matters to a distributor

- You are building on a plan designed by someone who has built a 100M USD direct-selling company — the Momentum Plan was modelled on ten-million-member organizations before the first module was sold.
- You are led by a coach whose profession is preparing people to perform; expect the same from the Delta One field culture.
- You can show prospects the founders' public records, not just their titles. Both profiles list their sources.

In their words

James Pack: “Principle and purpose over ego and economics. We are not here to make a million USDT. We are here to change a million lives.”

Ricky Lundell: “My career has been about building people and teams for high-stakes environments. At Delta 1, the mission changes. The standard doesn't.”

The founders' story — how James and Ricky met and why they built Delta One together, in their own words, to be supplied and approved before distribution.
